Introduction

THIS author-subject index to the first ten volumes of The Priest includes references to Currente Calamo, Editorials, Fillers, Questions and Answers, Sermon Suggestions, and Correspondence as well as to Articles and Book Reviews. Inclusive paging is generally used to distinguish an article from the other forms of writing.

Coverage of editorials and feature articles is limited to the specific subject(s) to which the whole writing is devoted. Thus there is no coverage of individual paragraphs which might deal with a subject different from (but related to) the subject of the whole.

The "dictionary" arrangement and the "direct access" approach are used. A "dictionary" arrangement is one in which all entries are arranged in a single alphabet. Hence the user will not find, for example, all special headings in the field of Canon Law in a special Canon Law section. The only classified or "form" heading used is "Book reviews." Reviewers and authors of books reviewed will also be found in their proper place in the main alphabet.

"Direct access" means that a specific rather than a general heading is used whenever possible. The term does not mean, for example, that all writings having political implications will be collected under "Politics." The index is not made for someone who wants to find in one place all general and special writings on a broad subject; it is rather made for a user looking directly for a specific subject. Cross references are used to connect related headings. Reading the titles under one entry may suggest other headings to be consulted also. While using the direct approach, the user should be aware that articles listed under a general heading may contain paragraphs on the more particular subject. Thus: this index lists seven writings on "Humility," but the user may find other references by reading the articles listed under "Christian life."

Selection of headings and cross references is guided by Kapsner's Catholic Subject Headings and by the headings used in The Catholic Periodical Index.
